LLC 651
Discourse and Conversation Analysis

Course Objectives

- To think critically about the role of language, language ideologies, and linguistic practice in our social institutions
- To acquire a basic understanding of the collective areas of study known as discourse analysis and conversation analysis, particularly from the fields of linguistics, sociology, anthropology, and media/communication studies
- To conduct close readings of written and spoken texts in a variety of forms and genres, particularly with regard to how power circulates through language
- To compare and assess various methodologies of discourse/ conversation analysis in relation to one's own individual research interests/project.

Summer 2021

Synchronous Session:
Wednesdays,
4:30 – 7:00 pm

Instructor:
Dr. Kerrie Kephart

For more information or permission to enroll, contact:

Liz Steenrod at esteenrod@umbc.edu

Language, Literacy, and Culture Doctoral Program