Dr. Gregg Brazinsky

Professor of History and International Affairs Co-Director, East Asia National Resource Center

This talk will look at the Korean War from the perspective of China and North Korea. It will focus on how Chinese and North Korean leaders mobilized their societies during the war and how they cultivated specific emotions among their soldiers and civilians.

The reshaping of Chinese and North Korean society during the Korean War would have tremendous influence on both countries during the Cold War and in some ways remains important today.
