UTC believes schools need a guarantee before teachers are certified, they must demonstrate improvement of student performance.

Why do effective teachers matter?

Teacher quality is the single most important factor in student learning within a school's power to influence. The difference in achievement growth between students with an effective teacher and those without is as much as a full grade equivalency in one year of instruction. While numerous factors impact student achievement, the quality of the interactions between teacher and student is the most important—in every classroom and in every school.

Who are we looking for?

UTC seeks individuals with a demonstrated track record of leadership, academic success and a commitment to accountability for student success. UTC looks for individuals who have a demonstrated interest in public service, who have a relentless desire to improve educational outcomes for urban youth and who have outstanding communication and interpersonal skills.

How does UTC ensure teacher accountability?

To graduate and be certified, UTC teachers must demonstrate significant improvement of their students' performance. All UTC residents are supported through a rigorous and comprehensive preparation program that includes a residency model, practice-based master's degree, additional certifications in core intervention models and structured on-site support and coaching.

“UTC provided me with exceptional support as a teacher. Whenever I need help, strategies, texts, and anything else, UTC is there by my side. Knowing that I have a fellowship of wonderful, smart, and determined first year UTC teachers makes my commitment to my students that much stronger.”
Adria J. (UTC Fellow, Cohort 2010)

For more information or to apply online, visit us on the web at www.urbanteachercenter.org. Application deadlines are October 15th and November 15th. An additional deadline in 2013: TBD. Please sign up for an upcoming webinar through the Events Section of the UTC website.
