

ERICKSON SCHOOL OF AGING STUDIES

Summer 2024 Graduate Courses

AGNG 600 SOCIAL & ECONOMIC CONTEXT OF AGING

Description: This course presents an overview of the many changes at all levels, from individual to societal, driven by the aging of the population in the United States. An interdisciplinary synthesis is the basis for understanding normal human aging in a cultural and community context and examining the harmful effects of stereotypes and ageism.

Instructor: Dr. Laura Allen

3 credits
online

AGNG 625 RESEARCH & EVALUATION

3 credits
online

Description: This course helps students become informed consumers of research. Key components of this course include understanding what information is required, how it can best be obtained, alternative ways of interpreting relevant data, and how to best incorporate knowledge into practice. Fundamentals of research and evaluation will be introduced including qualitative, quantitative, using archival data, and others.

Instructor: Professor Christin Diehl,
UMBC Hilltop Institute

Summer Course
Registration begins on 3/1/2024

Last day to add
5/31/24

AGNG 699 INDEPENDENT STUDY

1-3
credits

Description: This is a course in independent reading for masters students, and is supervised by a member of the Erickson School faculty. The purpose of this course is to give students the opportunity to study a topic of interest which is not available from the existing course offerings. Credit is variable, reflecting varied scope of student projects.

Instructor: Dr. Lee Ann Ferguson

Instructor Consent Required

8 week courses start on May 28, end July 19, 2024

For additional information on these courses contact the Erickson School Director of Graduate Programs, Lee Ann Ferguson, at FergusonL@umbc.edu