Meet with editors from three presses (Amherst College Press, Palgrave Macmillan, and Saint Lucy Books), a literary agent, and a writing consultant to learn about options for book publishing and to hear their suggestions for faculty authors interested in pitching new projects.

Time will be provided for small group discussion.

Hannah Brooks-Motl
Assistant Acquisitions Editor
Amherst College Press

An open access, digital-first press committed to the mission and ethos of the liberal arts

Deirdre Mullane
Mullane Literary Associates

An independent literary agency with an emphasis on idea-driven nonfiction, especially in the areas of history, science, politics, narrative nonfiction, nature/environment, sports, mind/body/spirit, and a small list of literary/commercial fiction

Mark Alice Durant
Saint Lucy Books

Publisher of elegant, idiosyncratic, and accessible books that combine words and images to celebrate contemporary photographic artists

Elizabeth Garber
Senior Editor for Sociology and Anthropology, Palgrave Macmillan

Commissions primarily monographs, edited collections, handbooks, reference works, and Palgrave Pivots in the areas of sociology (with a North American focus) and anthropology

Carole Sargent
Founding director of Office of Scholarly Publications, Georgetown University

Helps scholars publish research in high-impact journals and university presses
