Winter Session 2014 with
Media and Communication Studies!
Classes run Jan. 2—Jan. 24

MCS 377:
Desktop Publishing and the Web

An introduction to desktop publishing on the Macintosh platform, the course will focus on the Adobe Design software. The course will aid students in solving design problems and developing skills in visual communication. Students will develop skills in vector and raster graphics and develop a website as well as become familiar with the use of the graphics in desktop publishing.

MCS 377 is a great opportunity to earn upper level credits, and counts towards the New and Applied Communication elective requirement for MCS majors!
