“ THE IMPACT OF ERICKSON

“ I never expected my education from the Erickson School of Aging Studies to lead to such a diverse and rewarding career. One of the things I've come to appreciate most about the field of aging is that there is no single career path. The knowledge and skills you gain can be applied in so many different ways, and there is tremendous opportunity to carve out your own path based on your interests and passions. My career has evolved in ways I never anticipated, and that flexibility has allowed me to grow professionally, explore new opportunities, and find meaningful ways to make an impact. ”

“ MOLLY'S ADVICE TO STUDENTS

“ The foundation of knowledge you build at UMBC can take you in directions you may never have imagined. No matter your field of study or career path, I encourage you to consider how your work can contribute to a society where people of all ages can thrive. Aging touches every discipline, and we need diverse perspectives and expertise to build communities ready for longer lives. ”
